Useful online heritage resources

• The City of Toronto's Heritage Preservation Services maintains an online inventory of about 8000 buildings in the City which have been assessed and are "listed" or "designated". This City inventory can be searched HERE.

• A very useful list of online historic maps of Toronto has been prepared by Nathan Ng.

- A separate listing of online Goad's Fire Atlases from the same compiler.
- A website about the original Park Lots with many maps.

• The Toronto's Historical Plaques website has photographs and the text of almost all the historic plaques in our area.

• A listing of online Toronto City Directories (up to 1970) is available.

• The Toronto City Archives have a useful page on researching the history of your house

• The Toronto Public Library has a very useful page on St Lawrence - their area is a bit larger than both the SLNA area and the HCD area; it contains links to maps, web sites, photographs and books.

• Google's Sidewalklabs has prepared a map of Toronto linked to historic photographs. (OldTO)
